KENAI FJORDS WILDERNESS LODGE

Located 12 nautical miles from the seaside community of Seward, Alaska, is Kenai Fjords Wilderness Lodge, a cozy, private, all-inclusive lodge situated on Fox Island and used exclusively for overnight guests May through September. The adventure begins when guests depart from Seward's Small Boat Harbor for their short journey to Fox Island, situated in the heart of scenic Resurrection Bay. Bald eagle, Dalls porpoise, and a variety of whales may be spotted along the way, including fin, minke, humpback, gray and orcas may be spotted along the way.

Eight comfortable, non-smoking cabins provide a tranquil escape from the hustle-bustle of every day life. Each is furnished with one double and one twin size bed, a private bathroom with shower, table and chairs, propane heater, solar and wind generator-powered electric lighting, and a battery powered alarm clock. Fall to sleep with the sound of waves lapping on the shore. There are no telephones, televisions or radios to interrupt this peaceful getaway.

Relax in the common sitting room equipped with a wood burning stove, books, games and a view that will take your breath away. Gourmet dinners and breakfasts are prepared for guests in the lodge dining room. The wild Alaska salmon lunch is served in the day lodge, a large gathering area that also welcomes day cruise visitors stopping for lunch and National Parks ranger presentation. Meals include coffee, tea, ice tea, lemonade or juice. Beer and wine may be purchase.

Spend a relaxing day exploring the 3-mile island on land or by sea. Join the naturalist for a narrative walk along the beach, enjoy a guided or non-guided hike or kayak excursion. Test skills at skipping stones. In the evening, gather around the campfire or the Wilderness Lodge to exchange tales you've heard about former resident and Alaska artist Rockwell Kent.

A gift shop is open in the day lodge during lunch and sells cards, souvenirs, clothing, keepsakes, and limited sundries.

Are you looking for a truly unique venue for a day meeting, special event, exclusive meal or wedding? Fox Island can accommodate 25 - 300 people from May through September. Limited audio/visual equipment is available with advance reservations.
